Where children thrive and community grows

The Intergenerational Schools are an award-winning network of public charter schools in Cleveland that help children learn at their own pace in a diverse and supportive community environment.

Our schools have small, multi-age classes that allow children to learn and teach alongside older adults who serve as learning partners.

The Intergens are public, nonprofit charter schools, which means any student can attend for free. Our performance is measured alongside traditional public schools through state testing, but the charter model allows us the flexibility to innovate.

Since 2000, we have been challenging the status quo in elementary education, and our approach has been recognized in Cleveland and internationally. Our small network of schools outperforms others in Cleveland, our teachers both nurture and model lifelong learning as professional educators, and our learning partnerships enrich our classrooms and neighborhoods. Most importantly, our families feel welcomed and our students thrive in school and beyond.

Why Your Support Matters

We're doing more with less.

The Intergenerational Schools receive 28% less per student funding than the average Ohio public school district. By running a lean operation, the Intergens are able to keep the average per-student spend at about $10,500. However, we are still left with a $500,000 funding gap—that's about $700 per student.

Your support fills the gap.

Friends of the Intergenerational Schools is a 501c(3) nonprofit organization positioned to raise funds on behalf of the Intergens to close this funding gap.

Help us transform public school education by making your gift to the Annual Fund today!
